GLOBAL MARKETS & ECONOMIES | WEEKLY ECONOMIC INDICATORS | CURRENCIES | PRECIOUS METAL | O I L |

GLOBAL ECONOMIES	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Factory activity in China expanded for a second straight month in April but at a much slower pace than expected, an official survey showed on Tuesday, suggesting the economy is still struggling for traction despite a flurry of support measures. • U.S. Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin said on Tuesday that he hopes to make "substantial progress" with Chinese negotiators in the next two rounds of trade talks, as the world's two largest economies look for ways to end their bruising trade war. • New Zealand business sentiment remained gloomy in April, an ANZ Bank survey showed on Thursday, pointing to a weaker economic growth and giving further ammunition central bank policymakers considering cutting interest rates. • The euro zone economy grew more than expected in the first quarter, rebounding from a slump in the second half of 2018, while unemployment fell to its lowest in more than a decade, data showed on Tuesday. • British consumers were unruffled by the latest twists and turns in the country's Brexit drama and companies have dialled down their worry levels, two surveys published on Tuesday showed. • Britain's main opposition Labour Party meets on Tuesday to hammer out its position on whether to demand a second referendum on any Brexit deal as part of its campaign for the European parliament election next month. • German annual inflation accelerated to 2.1 percent in April, exceeding the European Central Bank's target for the first time since November, data showed on Tuesday, suggesting little need for further monetary easing. • Canada's sluggish economy unexpectedly shrank in February as bad weather hurt rail shipments of key commodities, Statistics Canada said on Tuesday, but analysts predicted a modest recovery in March. • Bank of Canada Governor Stephen Poloz on Tuesday said that while the Canadian economy currently faced some headwinds, there was good reason to believe growth would accelerate in the second half of this year. • U.S. labor costs increased steadily in the first quarter as a jump in transportation and manufacturing wages was offset by small gains elsewhere, pointing to moderate inflation pressures even as the labor market tightens.
GLOBAL MARKETS	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Global equity markets edged higher on Tuesday as the Dow and S&P 500 indexes erased early lows caused by weak Chinese business surveys and a tumble in shares of Google parent Alphabet, while the euro strengthened on the heels of data that showed euro zone growth topped expectations. • Major U.S. indexes were able to move off their lows, however, after Senate Democratic Leader Chuck Schumer said U.S. President Donald Trump agreed with Democratic leaders to spend $2 trillion on infrastructure and White House chief of staff Mick Mulvaney said talks between the United States and China aimed at resolving their trade dispute will likely be resolved "one way or the other" in the next two weeks. • Investors were looking ahead to a policy statement from the Federal Reserve on Wednesday and payrolls data at the end of the week. The Fed is largely expected to leave U.S. interest rates unchanged as it seeks to balance solid economic growth against low inflation.
FOREX	The euro climbed to a one-week high against the dollar on Tuesday after first-quarter economic growth figures in the euro zone beat market expectations, dispelling some pessimism over the economic bloc's common currency. Mixed U.S. data and caution ahead of a two-day Federal Reserve meeting pushed the dollar further away from a near two-year high. Euro zone economic growth accelerated to 0.4% in the first three months of 2019, recovering from a slump in the second half of last year, data showed on Tuesday. The stronger-than-forecast data offset a disappointing manufacturing PMI survey this month

	and cautious comments from European Central Bank policy-makers which raised concerns that the broader economy is struggling to gain traction. Higher-than-expected growth figures could squeeze some hedge funds who have been amassing large short positions in the euro, worth a net $14.8 billion in the week to April 23. In late U.S. trading, the euro was 0.3% higher at $1.1219 after the euro zone growth data. The currency ended up 0.01% in April, shaving its year-to-date loss against the greenback to 2.17%. An index that tracks the dollar against the euro, yen, sterling and three other currencies was down 0.38% at 97.489, paring its monthly gain to 0.2%. It hit a 23-month high at 98.330 last Friday. Earlier Tuesday, data showed U.S. labor costs grew 0.7% in the first quarter, reinforcing the notion that wage pressure would stay tame even although hiring has remained strong, the Labor Department said. Moreover, U.S. Midwest factory activity unexpectedly fell in April to its weakest since January 2017, according to an index from MNI and the Institute for Supply Management-Chicago. Analysts expect no policy changes coming out of the Fed's two-day policy meeting, which ends on Wednesday, but investors want to hear how Fed Chairman Jerome Powell resolves the divergence between solid economic growth and slowing inflation. Trading volume was muted by Japanese markets being closed for the Golden Week holiday. Activity will likely drop off further on Wednesday when China and much of Europe will be off for the May Day holiday. The Japanese yen rallied to a three-week high after China's official Purchasing Managers' Index dipped to 50.1 April. It was up 0.26% at 111.355 yen per dollar, reducing its month-to-date loss to 0.483%.
GOLD	Gold prices firmed on Tuesday as the dollar slipped to a one-week low, making bullion more attractive, with investors awaiting the Federal Reserve's interest rate decision this week to gauge the outlook for U.S. monetary policy. Spot gold rose 0.3 percent to $1,283.66 per ounce as of 2:59 p.m. EDT (1859 GMT). U.S. gold futures settled up 0.3 percent at $1,285.70 an ounce. However, the metal was down about 0.6 percent so far this month, on track for its third consecutive monthly decline. The dollar index, which tracks the greenback against major currencies, fell to its lowest level since April 23. The U.S. currency is down 0.4 percent, which could be its biggest daily percentage decline in more than three weeks. Investors are looking to the Federal Reserve's two-day policy meeting for clues on the outlook for U.S. interest rates. A decision on rates will be announced on Wednesday. The U.S. central bank last month abandoned expectations of any rate hikes this year. Interest rate futures traders are currently pricing in a 61 percent chance of an interest rate cut by December, according to the CME Group's FedWatch Tool. Lower interest rates decrease the opportunity cost of holding nonyielding bullion and weigh on the dollar, making gold cheaper for investors holding other currencies. The yellow metal, often seen as an alternative investment during times of political and financial uncertainty, earlier rose as much as 0.5 percent after disappointing factory activity data from China decreased investor appetite for higher-risk assets. In other precious metals, silver gained about 0.4 percent to $14.96 per ounce, but was on track for its third straight monthly percentage decline. Platinum fell about 1 percent to $885, but was up over 4-1/2 percent so far this month. Palladium jumped 1.2 percent to $1,387.01 an ounce, after touching its lowest level in nearly two weeks at $1,354 earlier in the session. The metal slumped more than 6 percent on Monday.
OIL	Oil prices pared their gains on Tuesday, after global benchmark Brent crude rose above $73 a barrel, as the market grew less worried that a rebellion against Venezuelan President Nicolas Maduro would hit the country's crude exports. Brent crude futures hit a session high of $73.27 per barrel and settled 76 cents, or 1.1 percent, higher at $72.80. Last week, Brent hit a six-month high above $75.

U.S. crude futures closed at $63.91, up 41 cents, or 0.7 percent, on the day, after hitting a session high at $64.75.

Prices rose after Venezuelan opposition leader Juan Guaido called for military backing to end Maduro's rule, but pared gains after the government said state-run oil company PDVSA's operations were not disrupted and top military leaders remained loyal.

OPEC member Venezuela's oil exports have already been reduced by U.S. sanctions on PDVSA and an economic crisis, helping to curb the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries' production to a four-year low, according to a Reuters survey.

Earlier, crude prices drew support when Saudi Arabia Energy Minister Khalid al-Falih said a deal between producers to cut output could be extended to the end of 2019. U.S. President Donald Trump has pressured OPEC to raise output as Washington has tightened sanctions against Iran.

OPEC and other allies led by Russia have agreed to cut output by around 1.2 million bpd for six months until the end of June. The group meets in Vienna on June 25-26 to decide on next steps.

Also supporting prices was government data showing that U.S. crude production fell in February for the second month in a row, sliding 87,000 barrels per day (bpd) to 11.7 million bpd.

Rising output to record levels has made the U.S. the top global oil producer, helping to boost domestic crude stocks to their highest since October 2017.

U.S. crude stockpiles were forecast to have added to those levels last week, a Reuters poll showed ahead of weekly data from industry group the American Petroleum Institute at 4:30 p.m. EDT (2030 GMT) on Tuesday, and from the Energy Information Administration on Wednesday.
