GLOBAL MARKETS & ECONOMIES | WEEKLY ECONOMIC INDICATORS | CURRENCIES | PRECIOUS METAL | O I L |

GLOBAL ECONOMIES	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Japan's machinery orders posted their first monthly increase in four months in February due to improved demand from the energy and telecommunications sectors but weakening global conditions remain major challenges for the world's third-largest economy. • Australia's central bank is keeping a close eye on how the divergence between a seemingly slowing economy and a strong labour market resolves itself to help determine where policy rates are headed, a senior official said on Wednesday. • The European Central Bank kept its policy unchanged as expected on Wednesday, maintaining interest rates at record lows and keeping its guidance for steady interest rates this year despite a sharp slowdown in economic growth. • ECB President Mario Draghi raised the prospect of more support for the struggling euro zone economy on Wednesday if its slowdown persisted, saying the central bank had "plenty of instruments" with which to react. • Britain's Brexit-bound economy unexpectedly grew in February, helped by manufacturers rushing to meet orders from clients who are stockpiling goods ahead of the country's break from the European Union, official data showed. • European Union leaders will grant Prime Minister Theresa May a second delay to Brexit at an emergency summit on Wednesday but will argue over how long and on what terms as they struggle to end Britain's troublesome membership. • U.S. consumer prices increased by the most in 14 months in March, but the underlying inflation trend remained benign against the backdrop of slowing domestic and global economic growth. • Federal Reserve policymakers debated how to manage the U.S. central bank's massive holding of bonds while agreeing to be patient about any changes to interest rate policy, according to the minutes from their March 19-20 meeting. The minutes, released on Wednesday, show the Fed saw the U.S. economy weathering a global economic slowdown, and policymakers made clear they saw no recession for the United States in the new few years.
GLOBAL MARKETS	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The euro rose and world stock markets edged higher on Wednesday amid tame U.S. inflation data and as the European Central Bank left its ultra-easy policy stance unchanged but warned that economic risks remained to the downside. • ECB President Mario Draghi confirmed policymakers were considering whether measures are needed to mitigate the impact on European banks of the central bank's negative deposit rates.
FOREX	The dollar and euro were little changed on Wednesday as the Federal Reserve and the European Central Bank hinted they are willing to leave interest rates alone amid signs of flagging growth and risk from trade tensions. Among major currencies, the Norwegian crown was the day's biggest gainer following stronger-than-expected inflation data that raised expectations of another interest rate hike from the central bank in the coming months. The Fed on Wednesday released the minutes on its March 19-20 meeting at which policy-makers signaled they would not raise rates in 2019 and they would stop shrinkage of its bond holdings by September. Earlier, President Mario Draghi underscored the risks facing the euro zone economy, reinforcing bets on possible further stimulus to prevent the region from slipping into recession. He was speaking at a press conference after a meeting where policy-makers left their easy policy unchanged. He also cited the risks from trade disputes to regional business activity after U.S. President Donald Trump threatened to impose tariffs on $11 billion worth of European Union goods. In late U.S. trading, the euro was up 0.09% at $1.1272 but was 0.09% lower at 125.085 yen. The greenback was bolstered earlier Wednesday by the latest reading of the U.S. consumer

	price index. The U.S. government's broadest inflation gauge rose 0.4% in March, the biggest monthly increase since January 2018, while the CPI core rate, which excludes volatile food and energy prices, edged up 0.1%, falling short of the 0.2% gain forecast by analysts polled by Reuters. The somewhat mixed CPI report soothed worries about price growth fading, but did not dispel the view the Federal Reserve may lower key U.S. interest rates by early 2020, analysts said. An index that tracks the greenback against a basket of currency was down 0.08% at 96.933. The dollar weakened to 2-1/2 week lows against the Norwegian crown, last down 0.72% at 8.4956. The euro fell to a near five-month low at 9.5768 crown. Norway's currency rose after the domestic core CPI for March came in at 2.7%, beating market expectations of a 2.5% increase. Just behind the crown was the Australian dollar which gained 0.61% at $0.71665 after touching the highest levels in six weeks.
GOLD	Gold rose on Wednesday, lifted to their highest in almost two weeks as investors fretted about the global economy and trade tensions, and as the European Central Bank and the U.S. Federal Reserve showed signs that monetary policy will remain accommodative. Spot gold was up 0.4 percent at $1,308.47 an ounce at 3:42 p.m EDT (1942 GMT). Prices hit their highest since March 28 at $1,310.50 during the session. U.S. gold futures settled 0.4 percent higher at $1,313.90. Gold drew support from political and economic worries such as the Brexit, U.S. politics and trade tensions between Washington and China and the Euro Zone, said George Gero, managing director at RBC Wealth Management. European Central Bank President Mario Draghi raised the prospect of more support for the struggling euro zone economy on Wednesday. Minutes of the Fed's latest meeting showed a patient stance on interest rate hikes. Analysts said these factors supported gold prices. Minutes of the Fed's March 19-20 meeting showed policy makers saw the U.S. economy weathering a global slowdown, with no recession for the United States in the next few years. Lower interest rates reduce the opportunity cost of holding non-yielding gold, which is seen as a safe haven during times of political and economic uncertainty. U.S. consumer prices increased in March by the most in more than a year, but underlying inflation remained benign against the backdrop of slowing domestic and global economic growth. World stocks inched up but remained below the six-month high reached earlier this week, as investors worried about U.S. President Donald Trump threatening more tariffs against the European Union. Holdings in the world's largest gold-backed exchange-traded fund, SPDR Gold Trust, fell for the seventh consecutive session on Tuesday and are at their lowest level since November. In other metals, spot platinum climbed 1.6 percent to $901.25 an ounce. On Monday it touched its highest since last May at $914.74. Palladium fell 0.1 percent to $1,387.51, while silver firmed by 0.2 percent to $15.24.
OIL	Oil futures climbed more than 1 percent on Wednesday after U.S. data showing a deep decline in gasoline stocks overrode a rise in crude inventories to 17-month highs, and as an OPEC report showed further tightening of Venezuela's crude supply. International benchmark Brent futures settled at $71.73 a barrel, gaining $1.12, or 1.59 percent, after hitting a five-month high of $71.78 a barrel. U.S. West Texas Intermediate (WTI) crude oil futures settled at $64.61 a barrel, rising 63 cents, or 0.98 percent, holding just below its strongest level since mid-November. U.S. crude stockpiles last week rose to their highest level since November 2017 as imports grew, while gasoline inventories posted the steepest drawdown since September 2017, the Energy Information Administration said. Crude inventories swelled by 7 million barrels last week, far surpassing forecasts for an increase of 2.3 million barrels. Gasoline stocks, however, fell 7.7 million barrels, more than triple the 2-million-barrel drop analysts had expected.

U.S. sanctions on oil exporters Iran and Venezuela, as well as supply cuts by the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) and allies including Russia, known as OPEC+, also boosted prices.

An OPEC monthly report released on Wednesday showed that Venezuela's oil output sank last month to a long-term low below 1 million barrels per day, due to U.S. sanctions and blackouts.

The figures could add to a debate within OPEC+ about whether to maintain oil supply cuts beyond June. A Russian official indicated this week that Moscow wanted to pump more, although OPEC has been saying the curbs must remain.

However, United Arab Emirates' energy minister said on Wednesday that Russia would not raise its output unless in coordination with the rest of the producer group.

Protests led to the resignation of Algeria's veteran president this month, and armed clashes have erupted near the Libyan capital, Tripoli, but political upheaval has yet to impact output in major North African producers.
