GLOBAL MARKETS & ECONOMIES | WEEKLY ECONOMIC INDICATORS | CURRENCIES | PRECIOUS METAL | O I L |

GLOBAL ECONOMIES	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Japan's machinery orders fell in January at the fastest pace in four months as the U.S.-China tariff war hit global trade, knocking demand from the country's auto and telecommunications equipment manufacturing sectors lower. Australian consumers have turned gloomy in a one-two punch to the economy already battling a steep property downturn and anaemic wages growth, raising the risk of an interest rate cut as soon as next month. Euro zone industrial production was stronger than expected in January, data showed on Wednesday, mainly thanks to a strong contribution from energy and despite a drop in German output. New orders for key U.S.-made capital goods rose by the most in six months in January and shipments increased, but the trend in both measures of business spending on equipment remained soft, leaving forecasts for weak first-quarter economic growth intact. British lawmakers on Wednesday rejected leaving the European Union without a deal in any scenario, paving the way for a vote to delay Brexit to seek a way out of the country's worst political crisis in generations. Lawmakers voted by 321 to 278 in favour of a motion that ruled out a potentially disorderly 'no-deal' Brexit under any circumstances.
GLOBAL MARKETS	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> World equity markets advanced broadly on Wednesday after U.S. data again showed risk-friendly low inflation, which weakened the dollar, while Boeing shares gained even as the United States said it would ground the company's 737 MAX aircraft. Shares in Europe rose on investor optimism that British lawmakers would reject leaving the European Union without a deal. A late night vote in Parliament ruled out a potentially disorderly 'no-deal' Brexit under any circumstances. U.S. producer prices edged barely higher in February, in the smallest annual increase since June 2017, the latest sign of tame inflation that supports the Federal Reserve's "patient" approach to future interest rate hikes.
FOREX	The British pound jumped in late Wednesday trade, hitting session highs after British lawmakers rejected leaving the European Union without a deal in any scenario. The non-binding vote will increase pressure on Prime Minister Theresa May to rule out a "no-deal" exit, and paves the way for a vote to delay Brexit. If Britain does seek a delay, it will require the agreement of all the bloc's other 27 members. The pound was last up 1.39 percent at $1.326 after a roller-coaster ride this week in which its price has moved within a range of 3-1/2 cents against the dollar. It remained slightly off the session high of $1.328 hit immediately after the vote as uncertainty remains around the process and the path forward. The U.S. dollar was softer on Wednesday after new inflation data bolstered the likelihood U.S. interest rates will not be raised any time soon. U.S. producer prices barely rose in February, the U.S. Labor Department reported on Wednesday, resulting in the smallest annual increase in more than 1-1/2 years. This is the latest sign of benign inflation, supporting the Federal Reserve's wait-and-see approach to further interest rate hikes this year. U.S. economic data from February has been weaker than expected: Employers added just 20,000 jobs last month, a 94 percent decline from January, and both consumer and producer prices reported this week have surprised modestly to the downside. The dollar was last down 0.41 percent against the euro, at $1.133. The U.S. dollar index, which measures the greenback against a basket of six rival currencies, was 0.43 percent lower at 96.515. The Australian dollar skidded lower after a consumer confidence gauge triggered fresh concerns about a slowing economy. A measure of Australian consumer confidence slumped to its lowest in over a year in March, adding to recent signs of weakness in the economy. Sentiment in China, a major trading partner for Australia, also deteriorated on Wednesday, with Chinese share prices falling.

GOLD

Gold hit nearly a two-week high on Wednesday as tepid U.S. economic data reinforced views the Federal Reserve would be patient on monetary policy, with bullion's appeal also bolstered by uncertainty over a Brexit deal ahead of a key vote.

Spot gold gained 0.5 percent to $1,308.83 per ounce as of 2:05 p.m. EDT (1805 GMT), its highest level since March 1. U.S. gold futures settled 0.9 percent higher at $1,309.3 per ounce.

Domestic producer prices in the United States rose 1.9 percent on a year-over-year basis in February, the smallest annual increase since June 2017.

Tepid inflation and disappointing producer price data this week support the Fed's stance of keeping interest rates on hold, denting the dollar and lifting demand for non-interest-yielding gold. The U.S. central bank's rate-setting committee will issue its next policy statement following its March 19-20 meeting.

Gold breached the psychologically significant $1,300 level on Tuesday, helped by a weaker dollar, with demand for the U.S. currency taking a hit after softer-than-expected U.S. February inflation data and falling government bond yields.

Prime Minister Theresa May lost a second attempt for her Brexit plan, plunging Britain deeper into a political crisis before the country's planned March 29 departure from the European Union, and denting risk appetite.

However, European shares regained some ground on Wednesday, buoyed by optimism that British lawmakers were set to rule out a no-deal Brexit. Britain's parliament is due to vote at 1900 GMT on whether the country should leave the EU on March 29 without a deal.

Reflecting sentiment, holdings in the world's largest gold-backed exchange-traded fund, SPDR Gold Trust, rose about 0.4 percent on Tuesday, a second straight day of gains.

Among other precious metals, palladium climbed 0.9 percent to $1,555.01 per ounce, while platinum rose 0.1 percent to $838. Silver was up 0.1 percent to $15.46 per ounce.

OIL

Oil futures rallied about 2 percent on Wednesday as U.S. crude inventories unexpectedly fell and an official forecast of crude oil supply growth from the world's top producer was revised lower.

A widespread power outage in Venezuela that has stalled crude exports from the OPEC-member nation, which has already seen reduced shipments from U.S. sanctions, helped to tighten the market.

Brent crude futures settled at $67.55 a barrel, up 88 cents, or 1.32 percent. U.S. crude oil futures settled at $58.26 a barrel, rising $1.39 cents, or 2.44 percent. Both benchmarks settled at their highest levels since mid-November.

U.S. crude stocks fell last week as refineries hiked output, the Energy Information Administration (EIA) said. Crude inventories fell by 3.9 million barrels in the last week, compared with analysts' expectations for an increase of 2.7 million barrels.

Other EIA data showed U.S. crude output edged down from a record high, dropping 100,000 barrels per day (bpd) to 12 million bpd last week.

On Tuesday, the EIA revised down its estimate for domestic crude production growth in 2019. The EIA also revised down its projected 2020 production figure.

Exports from Venezuela's main oil terminal have been stranded as its worst blackout on record has left parts of the country without power for roughly a week.

The terminal resumed operations by Wednesday, according to two sources and Refinitiv Eikon data, but shipments have not started up. Power has been restored to many parts of the country in recent days.

Oil prices have also received support from supply cuts led by the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries and allies including Russia.

On Monday, Saudi Arabia, indicated it would cut April exports. Energy Minister Khalid al-Falih, the previous day, said the production-curbing agreement would likely last until at least June.
