GLOBAL ECONOMIES	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Growth in China's industrial output fell to a 17-year low in the first two months of the year and the jobless rate rose, pointing to further weakness in the world's second-biggest economy that is likely to trigger more support measures from Beijing. Canadian home prices fell in February for the fifth straight month as most major markets weakened, data showed on Wednesday. The Teranet-National Bank Composite House Price Index, which measures changes for repeat sales of single-family homes, showed prices fell 0.4 percent last month from January. Germany's Ifo institute on Thursday slashed its 2019 growth forecast for Europe's largest economy to 0.6 percent from 1.1 percent due to weaker foreign demand for industrial goods and increased headwinds for exporters. British house prices are growing at their weakest pace since 2011 as the prospect of Brexit weighs increasingly on the housing market, according to a survey published on Thursday. The Royal Institution for Chartered Surveyors (RICS) said its monthly house price balance sank to -28 in February, the lowest since May 2011, from -22 in January. U.S. President Donald Trump and Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin said on Thursday that discussions with China to end a months-long trade war are progressing quickly, though Trump said he could not say whether a final deal would be reached. The number of Americans filing applications for unemployment benefits increased more than expected last week, suggesting the labor market was slowing, but probably not to the extent implied by a near-stall in job growth in February. While other data on Thursday showed import prices rising by the most in nine months in February, the trend in imported inflation remained weak. Import prices dropped on a year-on-year basis for a third straight month in February. News on the housing market remained downbeat, with new home sales dropping more than expected in January. British lawmakers voted overwhelmingly on Thursday to seek a delay in Britain's exit from the European Union, setting the stage for Prime Minister Theresa May to renew efforts to get her divorce deal approved by parliament next week. Lawmakers approved by 412 votes to 202 a statement setting out the option to request a short delay if a Brexit deal can be agreed by March 20 -- or a longer delay if no deal can be agreed in time.
GLOBAL MARKETS	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> A gauge of global equity markets traded little changed on Thursday as European shares rose ahead of new voting that backed a Brexit delay and bolstered the dollar, while Wall Street meandered on uncertainty over U.S.-China trade talks. The dollar gained for the first time in a week as the pound fell even after Parliament voted overwhelmingly to seek a delay to the March 29 deadline for Britain to exit the European Union. European shares rose to a five-month high as sentiment improved from cautious to upbeat after the open. But a Bloomberg report of a likely delay in U.S.-China trade talks, coupled with fresh data showing weak U.S. home sales, hurt U.S. stocks.
FOREX	Sterling retreated on Thursday as investors prepared for Prime Minister Theresa May to try again to win approval for her Brexit deal, after lawmakers voted overwhelmingly to seek a delay to the United Kingdom's exit from the European Union. May will now renew efforts to get her twice-rejected divorce deal approved next week by Britain's parliament. She is piling pressure on rebel lawmakers to back her by threatening a longer delay if they vote against her. After a highly volatile week for the pound during which it hit a nine-month high when lawmakers rejected leaving the EU without a deal, trading was relatively calm on Thursday. May's push for another vote on the deal sets the stage for another showdown between her and rebel eurosceptics and means more uncertainty for investors." In the latest of a series of votes, lawmakers on Thursday approved by 412 votes to 202 a statement setting out the option to request a short delay if a Brexit deal can be agreed by March 20 -- or a longer delay if no deal can be agreed in time.

	All 27 EU members must approve any extension. Sterling was down 0.8 percent at $1.3234 by 1850 GMT, slightly lower than before the vote to seek a Brexit departure delay. It was down 0.6 percent against the euro at 85.35 pence. The pound on Wednesday enjoyed its biggest one-day gain against the dollar since last April after UK lawmakers resoundingly voted to reject a no-deal Brexit. Investors hope eurosceptic parliamentarians will finally back the unpopular deal Prime Minister Theresa May negotiated with the EU. If not, they may have to accept that Brexit could be watered down or even thwarted by a lengthy delay. Some of that optimism has already faded, however, with no sign that lawmakers can reach any consensus on amending May's deal so it is acceptable to all sides and the EU. A series of votes, including on introducing a second Brexit referendum, were rejected by parliament earlier on Thursday and the pound was little moved. WILD RIDE Sterling has swung wildly this week, trading between extremes of $1.2945 and $1.3380. It reached a peak of 84.72 pence to the euro, approaching recent 22-month highs. Those gains have been hard to cling onto as traders contemplate the array of possibilities that have opened up. Options markets show implied sterling volatility -- a gauge of expected swings in a currency -- still elevated, with two-week vols jumping off one-week lows touched on Wednesday. Sterling vol is higher than G10 as well as many emerging currency peers.
GOLD	Gold fell more than 1 percent on Thursday, slipping below $1,300 for a second time this month, as fears of a "no-deal" Brexit faded and the dollar gained versus the pound ahead of a vote to extend the deadline for Britain's exit from the European Union. Spot gold was down 1 percent at $1,296.51 per ounce as of 2:29 p.m. EDT (1829 GMT), retreating from $1,311.07 reached on Wednesday, its highest since March 1. U.S. gold futures settled 1.1 percent lower to $1,295.1 an ounce. The dollar index drew strength from a subdued pound ahead of a parliamentary vote, expected to call for a short delay to Brexit, later in the day. Also impeding demand for gold, global equities rode a surge in European stocks as risks of a British no-deal divorce from the EU faded. U.S.-China trade talks are also keeping investors on their toes. U.S. President Donald Trump cited progress in the talks, following reports saying leaders of the two countries have postponed their next meeting to at least April. Trump had earlier emphasized he was in "no rush" to secure a deal with China. The dollar has been the preferred refuge for investors concerned by the heightened trade tensions since last year, in turn denting appeal for gold. However, analysts said demand for the metal may soon increase on expectations that the U.S. Federal Reserve would refrain from raising interest rates after their policy meeting next week. Silver slipped for the first time in five sessions and was down nearly 2 percent at $15.18 per ounce. Palladium inched 0.1 percent higher to $1,557.51 per ounce, while platinum dipped 1.6 percent to $823.77.
OIL	Oil prices steadied on Thursday after hitting 2019 highs as OPEC built its case to extend its production cut program past June while lowering its forecast for crude demand. Crude futures also wavered on uncertainty over the progress of U.S.-China trade talks and global economic growth. Brent crude hit a four-month peak of $68.14 per barrel before settling at $67.23, down 32 cents from Wednesday's close. U.S. West Texas Intermediate crude futures settled at $58.61 a barrel, up 35 cents. Both benchmarks had rallied on Wednesday on U.S. government data showing a surprise fall in crude inventory and a lower-than-expected estimate of U.S. crude production growth. In its monthly report released on Thursday, the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries cut the forecast for demand for its crude this year and predicted strong growth in non-OPEC supply.

OPEC's bearish demand outlook and rising production was offset by its apparent resolve to extend crude output cuts, agreed to by its members and allied producers, which have helped oil prices rise more than 20 percent this year.

Fresh concerns about the global economy dented oil prices.

President Donald Trump said on Thursday the United States was doing well in trade talks with China, but that he could not say whether a final deal would be reached.

Meanwhile, data showing China's industrial output grew 5.3 percent in January and February, the slowest pace of expansion in 17 years, weighing on demand sentiment.

A U.S. Commerce Department report showed sales of new U.S. single-family homes fell more than expected in January, suggesting housing market weakness early in the first quarter.

Supply disruptions from OPEC members Venezuela and Iran limited losses.

Amid political turmoil in Venezuela, two storage tanks exploded at a heavy-crude upgrading project in the east of the country on Wednesday, according to an oil industry source and a legislator. The country's main oil terminal resumed shipments after a prolonged blackout.

Two sources told Reuters that the United States aims to curb Iran's crude exports by about 20 percent to below 1 million barrels per day from May, likely reining in waivers for Tehran's remaining customers.
